October 10, 2019

ADP continues as longstanding employer of choice in the Lehigh Valley, bringing 1,000 associates to one of its new ADP Inside Sales Centers of Excellence

ROSELAND, N.J., Oct. 10, 2019 /PRNewswire/ -- ADP, a leading global technology company providing human capital management (HCM) solutions, today opened a new office in Downtown Allentown, affirming its continued investment and commitment across the Lehigh Valley. One thousand associates will occupy the new space, which encompasses 243,241 square feet spanning 10 floors of the new Class A office tower at Five City Center.

State Governor Tom Wolf, State Senator Pat Browne, Allentown Mayor Ray O'Connell, and J.B. Reilly, president of City Center Investment Corporation (CCIC), joined company executives and associates during a ribbon-cutting celebration in Allentown earlier today.

"It's always a great day when I'm celebrating business growth in Pennsylvania, and today is especially exciting because this project is bringing a dynamic group of 1,000 workers to Allentown's revitalized downtown area," said Governor Tom Wolf. "And, while I certainly want to give credit to ADP for choosing Allentown as its new home, I also recognize the economic resurgence that's happening in the Lehigh Valley. Allentown is in the midst of a reinvention and state and local officials are committed to working collaboratively to making the Lehigh Valley once again known worldwide as a place of wealth and success."

"Today we celebrate more than ADP's Grand Opening in Downtown Allentown," remarked Senator Browne. "We celebrate that a Fortune 500 Company has recognized that Pennsylvania's third largest city in general and Five City Center in particular have much to offer to ADP's millennial employees: first-class modern office space, a plethora of food and restaurant choices close by, a world-class entertainment venue in the same block, walkability, greenspace and unique urban living spaces. There's an old saying that a city is not gauged by its length and width, but by the broadness of its vision and the height of its dreams. Thanks to ADP and J. B. Reilly, vision and dreams have become reality. Today marks the singular largest commercial investment in the history of Downtown Allentown."

"ADP's arrival downtown has made an immediate extremely positive impact," said Mayor O'Connell. "Hundreds of new feet are on the street brightening the future for local retailers and restaurants. ADP's record of community involvement is raising the hopes of our non-profit partners. Allentown has been making tremendous strides and we could not be more proud to be the new home for ADP and its many talented employees."

"ADP's commitment to grow in downtown Allentown is nothing short of transformational for this community," said City Center Investment Corp. President J.B. Reilly. "The impact of having ADP's bright, active and engaged group of professionals based in Five City Center has already been felt by the downtown's retail, restaurant, housing, arts and nonprofit communities. Having another corporation come downtown illustrates again that companies – in this case one whose actual business is human resources – recognize that being in a vibrant, urban environment affects their ability to attract and retain talented employees. This move follows a national trend of companies realizing the benefits of moving from suburban to urban locations."

During the ribbon-cutting ceremony, Carlos Rodriguez, president and chief executive officer of ADP, applauded state and local leaders for their support in helping the organization create a better world at work.

"At ADP, we are focused on designing a better world at work, and this new office certainly lays the foundation for us to fulfill that objective," said Rodriguez. "We want to provide our associates and clients alike the tools and guidance they need to reach their business goals and fulfill their own potential. I am incredibly grateful to the ADP associates in Allentown, whose dedication enables ADP to innovate and offer the world-class solutions that can help clients and their employees achieve something greater together."
